

Job Opportunities

Graduates of the Department have wide job opportunities in the labour market. They can be employed as management trainees, administrative assistants, and executive assistants with potentials to move to full managerial positions in almost all the sectors of the Nigerian economy. Specifically, they are well suited to work in the following sectors: financial services sector, telecommunications, oil and gas industry, manufacturing and international organisations and agencies. They can also work in the civil service in administration and personnel units.

Graduates of the programme possess hands-on training on how to start and run small businesses, thereby creating jobs both for themselves and for others. This is a major selling point of the Programme.